

Reality Check

Are you part of a church that meets in buildings that have been in use for a long time? Are they effective in enabling the core business of your church in society today? Has it passed its use-by date? Here are a few tell-tale signs:

- Apathy or lack of urgency about mission.
- Frustration about excessive activity or lack of it on church property.
- Members disagree about change so nothing happens.
- Outdated buildings and grounds.
- No agreement on where we should concentrate our efforts.

There is a solution: clarify your own church's specific mission and then see how your property can support it. We have developed a process over several years called Missional Identity (MiD) that will:

- Engage people in mission thinking.
- Develop unity and avoid diversions.
- Enable leaders to know what their members think.
- Create a shortlist of mission priorities that has consensus in your church.
- Evaluate your property in service of that mission.

From a final MM presentation

Following this the Missional Masterplanning (MM) service provides a clear way forward:

- Develop a strategy for property changes: Improve / Redeploy / Acquire / Replace
- A design is prepared based on your agreed mission.
- A workshop process with an architect can refine the design proposals.
- Consider cost and funding.
- Provide a final presentation to the whole church with a plan to implement.

More information here

"This process has opened my eyes and helped me to look at our ministries."

"It's not until you stop and actually take the time to look at the individual areas of the building you realise just how insufficient it is in facilitating effective excellent ministries."

Old church members after MiD and MM

More reviews for Making Property Serve Mission

b:log